Although This Pair Have Fought a Score of Times, This Battle, Which Is Over the Fifteen-Round Route to a Decision, Is Expected to Be as Interesting as Any Previous Encounter.

By Vincent Treanor.

TACK BRITTON will defend his welterweight title to-night in the Garden against Ted (Kid) Lewis. It will be the twentieth time the pair have met. After many contests, with varying results, Britton at Canton, O.,

March 17, 1919, put over a knockout wallop in the ninth round on Lewis, who has always been Jack's closest rival among the welters. Since that date Britton has travelled about the country, a real fighting champion, willing to give any contender a chance. Lewis, pocketing his disappointment, deliberately started out to regain his crown. First there was a long siege of health building to recover strength that was lost down South when the former champion was a boxing instructor in 1918. It was to a mysterious Southern malady more than anything else

Lewis attributed his defeat at Canton. Last year Ted re-entered the ring. strong, confident and ready for all comers. Lewis sought his opponents over in England, a campaign that ended with the knockout of Johnny Basham, who had been cleaning up everything in the British Isles. On the strength of this showing, Lewis asked and received a chance to tackle Britton again. The bout was originally scheduled for London, but a hitch popped up and Tex Rickard waltzed in and plucked it for to-night at the Garden.

Britton is one of the most remark- -able champions in recent years. Now likely to be on the same order. Why Johnny Beckman of the Orig inal Critics is called the "Babe Ruth of the net game" was again proven tast night at the 71st Regiment Armory, where he made 17 goals from fouls and 5 baskets. Beckman's great eye and accurate pair of arms were sufficient to enable the Original Celtics of this city to defeat the Powers Brothers' Five of Passaic, 37 to 24, in one of the hardest games of the season. The Jersey invaders played a wonderful game of basketbail. Over-anxiety on their part cost them the chance to win the title, as the Celtics were far from the invincible team they generally are.
